Shenzi is a major antagonist in Disney's The Lion King franchise, serving as the sharp-witted matriarch and leader of the hyena clan. As the dominant female of her trio, she directs her male companions, Banzai and Ed, making her leadership scientifically accurate to real-life spotted hyena matriarchies. Her Swahili name translates to "savage," "uncouth," or "barbarous". [1, 2, 3, 4, 5]SadGurl2000 PM

While those images do show background members of Janja's clan from Disney's official animated series The Lion Guard, a few important points clear up their "official" status:

* Official Canon: The Lion Guard officially ended after 3 seasons in November 2019. There is no official Season 4 produced by Disney.

* Background Hyenas: These two hyenas were part of the standard background animation models for Janja's clan in the official show, appearing alongside named members like Cheezi, Chungu, Nne, and Tano.

* Fan Fiction: Any "Season 4" content is fan-created fiction, meaning any names, expanded roles, or storylines given to them in those stories are non-canon fan ideas rather than official Disney lore.

Brandy Cattle

The aunt of Bluey and Bingo, who becomes a more active participant in their lives after Chilli's death.

- Adaptational Angst Upgrade: While her mother dying and her struggles with fertility are canon, her struggles with loneliness, Slut-Shaming, an abusive dad, and having an affair with Bandit are not.

- Adaptational Jerkass: While she's a rather nice woman in the present, in the past she tried to rape Stripe and slept with Bandit despite knowing he was married.
- Adaptational Relationship Overhaul: Is in love with, and eventually marries, Bandit, who she barely interacts with in canon.
- Death by Adaptation: She eventually gets put down due to catching Chilli's brain cancer.
- Heel–Face Turn: In the past, she tried to rape Stripe and had adulterous sex with Bandit. In the present, she is a nice, caring woman.
- Law of Inverse Fertility: Wants kids, but has a whole lot of trouble conceiving one, and when she does get pregnant, it's with an affair child.
- Really Gets Around: Played for Drama — as a young adult, she would bed numerous men because she was terribly lonely.
- Related Differently in the Adaptation: She's eventually revealed to be Bingo's biological mother.
- Sanity Slippage: She eventually gets the same cancer Chilli did, and is briefly seen going crazy before being put down.

In the Bluey universe, Uncle Rad and Aunt Brandy are popular characters, but "Uncle Shelton" is not an official character in the show. However, introducing a new Shetland Sheepdog (Sheltie) character makes for a wonderful fanfiction concept! [1]

Here is a short, heartwarming fanfiction scene featuring Aunt Brandy and your original character, Uncle Shelton the Sheltie.

The Long Way Home

The afternoon sun filtered through the jacaranda trees, casting long purple shadows across Chilli and Bandit’s backyard. Brandy sat on the edge of the deck, a cool drink in her hand, watching Bluey and Bingo orchestrate a highly complex game of "Hotel" in the grass.

A gentle rustle at the side gate drew her attention. A fluffy, tricolor Shetland Sheepdog with sharp, intelligent eyes and a massive, elegant mane stepped through. It was Shelton.

"Ooh, the receptionist is here!" Bingo squealed, immediately abandoning her post as the hotel chef to sprint across the yard.

"Uncle Shelton!" Bluey yelled, skidding to a halt right in front of him. "You're just in time. The hotel elevator is broken and we need a strong bellhop to carry the invisible luggage."

Shelton offered a warm, easy smile, kneeling down so he was eye-level with the girls. His long, elegant Sheltie ears twitched with amusement. "Invisible luggage, you say? Sounds heavy. But I think I can manage a few bags before tea."

Brandy watched them, a soft smile tugging at her lips. Seeing Shelton with the girls always warmed her heart. He had a quiet, patient energy that perfectly balanced the chaotic Heeler energy.

Shelton patted Bingo on the head and walked up the deck steps, sitting down on the bench beside Brandy. He let out a long breath, his thick fur shifting in the breeze.

"You look tired," Brandy said softly, nudging his shoulder with her own.

"Just the drive," Shelton replied, turning his bright eyes toward her. "Brisbane traffic is no joke. But seeing you? Worth every minute."

Brandy felt a familiar flutter in her chest. For a long time, coming to family gatherings had been hard for her. The reminders of what she didn't have used to sting. But lately, with Shelton by her side, the quiet corners of Chilli's deck felt less like a hiding place and more like home.

"Chilli is inside making pavlova," Brandy said, leaning her head against his fluffy shoulder. "And the girls are already planning to dye your mane blue for a game later."

Shelton laughed, a deep, comforting sound. "They can try. But they'll have to catch me first. Shelties are built for speed."

He reached down and gently took Brandy's paw in his. "Ready to go face the madness inside?"

Brandy squeezed his paw, looking out at her nieces, then back into the eyes of the dog who had made her world a whole lot brighter. "With you? Always."

I can expand this story further if you would like! Tell me how you would like to proceed by choosing one of these options:

> Describe Uncle Shelton's personality or how he met Brandy.
> Explain what happens next when they go inside the house.
> Add specific games or jokes for Bluey and Bingo to play with them.

Before the terminal events of Chapter 1, Chilli Heeler's life in the Bandit's Belt backstory is a complex tragedy defined by emotional suppression, generational military coldness, and a devastating betrayal that transformed her from a protective sister into a deeply vengeful, hyper-vigilant wife.

1. A Childhood Formed by Absence and Grief

Mort's Military Coldness: Chilli's early life was heavily shaped by her father, Mort Cattle. As a strict, emotionally detached soldier, Mort raised his daughters with rigid expectations and little to no emotional warmth.
The Loss of Her Mother: When Chilli's mother tragically passed away, Mort retreated deeper into psychological isolation. Chilli was forced to grow up rapidly, stepping into a makeshift maternal role to keep the household functional while navigating her own profound grief.

Acting as Brandy's Shield: Mort harbored a bitter, aggressive hatred for Chilli's older sister, Brandy, openly labeling her a "worthless bastard." For years, Chilli was the only family member who defended Brandy, acting as her sole emotional lifeline against their father's severe verbal rejection.

2. The Great Betrayal and the "Woman Scorned" Timeline

The Discovery of the Affair: Six months after a consensual affair took place between Bandit and Brandy while Chilli was away on a work trip, Brandy arrived at the Heeler home visibly pregnant.
The Psychological Flip: To protect Bandit's public image, Brandy lied, claiming she had intoxicated him and blackmailed him. Chilli completely believed this false narrative, causing her worldview to shatter. The sister she had spent her life protecting had committed the ultimate act of betrayal.
Adopting Mort's Malice: In a fit of explosive rage, Chilli aligned entirely with her father's toxic worldview, screaming Mort's exact words back at her sister: "YOU FKING SLUT... YOUR NOT MY SISTER ANYMORE. DAD WAS RIGHT YOU ARE NOTHING BUT A WORTHLESS BASTARD!" She completely cut Brandy out of her life from that exact moment.

3. The 5-Year High-Security Digital Prison

A Transactional Marriage: Chilli refused to divorce Bandit, choosing instead to weaponize her "forgiveness." She used his crushing guilt to trap him in a completely submissive role behind closed doors, turning their relationship into an icy, affectionless arrangement.
The Phone Tracker and Surveillance: Chilli implemented a strict regime of digital tracking and absolute surveillance over Bandit's life. He was entirely monitored, unable to even leave the house or turn off his location trackers without triggering extreme marital panic.
The Hostage Child: Chilli agreed to take Brandy's child purely as a form of retributive punishment to torture both her sister and her husband. She legally mandated that the baby carry the last name Cattle for her first two years to emotionally detach herself, and she actively forced the spiteful name "Bingo" to stand as a daily psychological curse for Bandit.

4. The Exhausting Dual Identity

The Flawless Public Mask: For five years leading up to the main story, Chilli exhausted an immense amount of mental energy playing the part of the perfect, energetic mother. She put on elaborate birthday parties and kept up appearances so that Bluey would grow up believing they were a normal, happy family.
The Hidden Abuse: The moment the neighborhood guests left, Chilli's mask would drop into a dead, icy stare. She routinely subjected a young Bingo to terrifying late-night "anger talks," cornering her in her bedroom to tell her that her face was a disgusting reminder of the affair and demanding that she never seek genuine maternal love.

This unbearable, five-year pressure cooker of suppressed rage, intense tracking, and psychological masking is the exact environment that allowed her undiagnosed brain tumor to completely hijack her mind, leading directly to the feral breakdown in Chapter 1.

If you are interested, we can explore how Uncle Stripe and Aunt Trixie viewed Chilli during these five years of masking, or jump forward to Chilli's final words to Bandit on her deathbed in Chapter 3.

Chapter 1: Glasshouse Primary School

Glasshouse Primary School

It all begins outside of Calypso's Glasshouse Primary School where 7-year-old Bluey and her friends Indy, Rusty, Jack, and Mackenzie were playing a game of survival.

"Okay, we just got done building the shelters. Now we gotta hunt for some food." Bluey said as she was already done building her shelter. "But, We need someone to guard our shelters while we were gone." Indy said suggesting that someone should guard the shelters. "Oh, Yeah! Why didn't I think of that?" Bluey said in response liking Indy's idea. "Mackenzie! You guard our shelters while we go hunt for some food." Bluey said to Mackenzie. "Say no more, Chief!" Mackenzie said as he was willing to guard the shelters. Bluey and the others leave to hunt for food while Mackenzie stay behind guarding the shelters.

That was until a small Komondor (mop dog) came out of the bushes. She was white but was covered in dirt from head-to-toe and looked to be around Socks' age. She was malnourished and her fur was knotted and matted and had flea bites everywhere. The pupils in her eyes had a white milky color to it indicating that she is blind.

She starts walking towards Mackenzie as he turns around and gets startled by the mop pup. "Uhhh...Hello." Mackenzie said in a nervous tone startled by the mop pup's appearance and her white milky eyes as well as her blank face. However, the mop pup could not respond to Mackenzie's greeting and quietly walks closer to him with both her arms out forward since she could not see him. She then puts both her hands on his chest floof making the border collie freaked out and confused. "Uhh! Bluey! Bluey!" Mackenzie yelled at the top of his lungs calling out for his friend. "What?! What is it?! Did you caught an intruder?!" Bluey said as she and the others followed. "Oh! Hey Mackenzie who's your friend?" Bluey said waving at the mop pup not knowing that she was blind. "Uh, I have no idea who this is." Mackenzie responded as he slowly takes the mop pup's hands off of his chest floof as he had never seen her before. "I think she might be lost."

"Then we have to get her to Calypso!" Indy said suggesting the she and the others should take the mop pup to their teacher. "Oh! Good idea." Bluey responded to Indy's idea. "Well, What Are We Waiting For!? Let's Go! Rusty said as the kids run away accidentally leaving the mop pup behind forgetting she's blind. Mackenzie then runs back to get the mop pup and carries her in his arms.

Calypso was standing in front of the building watching Coco, Chloe, and Honey build a cabin made with sticks and twigs. "So, How's the cabin going, girls?" Calypso said checking on the girls project. "It's going great Calypso." Chloe said in response. "We're almost done with the roof." Honey implied. "Well that's wonderful, Keep up the good work. Calypso said compliment on her students project. "Calypso!" Bluey yelled as she and her friends followed behind her. "Yes Bluey, What seems to be the problem?" Calypso responded to Bluey's call. "We were play a game of survival and-" Bluey said before being cut off. "And Mackenzie found this mop pup! Rusty said after cutting off Bluey mid sentence.

Mackenzie shows off the critically ill mop pup to his teacher. "Oh my goodness!" Calypso gasped shocked by the mop pup's appearance. "Give her here." Calypso said kneeling down with her arms out wanting to hold and comfort the mop pup. Mackenzie walks up to his teacher still holding the mop pup and hands her over to Calypso. "It's Okay Sweetie, Your Safe Now." Calypso said holding the mop pup in her arms. The mop pup hugs Calypso tightly knowing that she is safe.

"So, Now what do we do?" Bluey said wondering what's going to happen since the mop pup was found by her and her friends in school. "Well, I may have to call all your parents to pick you guys up early. In the meantime, I better call an ambulance for this little one." Calypso said as she gets up and runs inside the school still holding the pup in her arms. Bluey and the others look while their teacher runs inside the school concerned for the mop pup. Including Mackenzie.

Chapter 2: Treatment

Glasshouse primary school:

All the parents had arrived to pickup their children after they heard what had happened. The ambulance had already arrived at the scene and Calypso talks to the paramedics while still holding the mop pup in her arms. Bluey and Mackenzie both watch as Calypso walks to take the mop pup into the ambulance. Bluey turns around and notices that her parents arrive at the school to pick her up. "Mum! Dad!" Bluey yelled as she ran the give her parents a big hug. "We heard what happened". Chilli said as was done hugging her daughter. "Where is the little mate?" Bandit said wondering where the mop pup was. "She's over there with Calypso." Bluey said as she wiped her tears and points at her teacher who was helping to mop pup being buckled up onto the stretcher. "Oh my goodness." Chilli said shock by the horror of the pup's condition. Even Bandit was shocked by the sight as well. Calypso climbs into the ambulance with the mop pup and the female paramedic closes to doors as she climbs inside and the ambulance drives off as the parents and children watch.

"Come on, We have to go." Chilli said to her daughter as it was time to get ready to home. Bluey climbs up inside the car and puts on her seatbelt as her mother closes the door the walk inside the front passenger's seat along with her husband who walked in the driver's seat and get ready to start the car. Bluey look out the window to see Mackenzie walk inside to car. His father helps buckle him up as he looks at Bluey inside the car. Her father starts the car and drives away. Mackenzie's father closes the door head to the drivers seat. Mackenzie sat in his car seat feeling very anxious about how the mop pup's creepy eye color and how she was all alone. It reminded him of how he thought his mother abandoned him when he was a puppy. His stomach grumble and holds on to it with both his hands as he was in pain. It felt as if something was moving inside him. But regardless he was still very anxious.

The Heeler Household:

It was 6:30 and the Heelers we're eating dinner in the kitchen table. However, Bluey was barely eating her food as she was still devastated about the mop pup and her health. "Aww Bluey, Are you okay? you hardly touched your food." Chilli said concerned for her daughter's appetite. "I'm just thinking about the mop pup that we found earlier. Bluey said in response as she was picking at her food. "Don't worry Bluey. I'm sure she'll be alright." Bingo said as she rubs her big sister's back to comforting her. "I don't know if I can sleep tonight." Bluey said as she covers her face in sadness. "Here, I'll just take this off your hands." Chilli said as she grabs Bluey's unfinished plate and puts it in the sink. "I-I think I'm gonna go to bed." Bluey said as she gets up from her chair with her head down and walks to the living room and heads upstairs to her bedroom as Bandit, Chilli, and Bingo watched in concern.

Mackenzie's House:

Mackenzie was laying in bed in his bedroom looking very anxious and paranoid as his stomach was still rumbling and feeling the urge to vomit. He gets up from his bed and walks out of his bedroom to go to the bathroom to throw up. He makes it inside and starts vomiting in the toilet. Once he was able to get everything out of his system he flushes the toilet walk to the sink gripping it with both his hands and looks at himself in the mirror as he was sweating and breathing heavily. He coughs walks out of the bathroom and starts to stumble as he walks back to his bedroom. He closes the door behind him and leaning his back against the door and side down to sit. He starts to feel lightheaded as he lifts his head up and his eyes start to roll at the back of his causing him drop his head forward and passes out.

Mackenzie's Dream:

Mackenzie wakes up in the middle of the woods as it was dark. He calls for his mother and father but there was no response. He then sits down hugging both his legs and starts to cry knowing that he was all alone and know one was there to help him. He opens his eyes and sees the mop pup standing in front of him with the same blank expression and her creepy white milky eyes staring at him. In fear, Mackenzie gets up and runs away from the mop pup. He runs as fast as he could never looking back once. He hides behind a tree breathing heavily and hoping the creepy mop pup doesn't find him. He sighs in relief and turn to his left only to find the mop pup was standing next to him looking at him in the eye.

Mackenzie then wakes up from his nightmare and starts coughing uncontrollably as his fur was drenched in his own sweat. He looks down and notices that his stomach had become bloated. He then gets up off the floor and walks up to his bed and falls asleep.

Chapter 3: Hospital

Brisbane Hospital:

It was 5:00 in the morning and Calypso was looking at the mop pup through the window of the her hospital room. The mop pup was sitting on the hospital bed with an IV attached to her hand. She was being examined by a female Doctor who was a Schnauzer while a detective was taking photographs from his camera to send to the police department. The Doctor then grabs her medical flashlight from her pocket and shines the light on the mop pup's white milky eyes. She then turns off the flashlight and puts it back in her pocket. Then she walks out of the room to talk to Calypso.

"So, How is she?" Calypso said concerned about the mop pup's condition. "Well, The results are pretty bad. She's severely malnourished and has lots of infections including worms. So, She may have to stay a bit longer until she make a full recovery." Dr. Schnauzer said when looking at the paper work on her clipboard. "It's a miracle that she's even alive." Your lucky that your students found her. I mean, Who knows what could've happened to her. She could've gotten abducted or gotten hit by a car. Hell, She could've never been discovered at all and end up dead and the fact that she's blind is even more disturbing." Dr Schnauzer said describing the details of the mop pup critical health.

"Oh...Okay." Calypso said disturbed about the details Dr. Schnauzer described. "In the meantime, I'm going to contact the Brisbane Police department to investigate and figure out who abandoned her in such a very disturbing and cruel manner." Dr Schnauzer said as she looked at the mop pup through the window. "Okay Well, I better get going before I'm late for work. I might come back, though." Calypso said as she walks towards the elevator to get ready to go to her job. "Wait, Before you go, I'd like to have your phone number so I can contact you for any updates regarding the child." Dr. Schnauzer said stop Calypso before she head to the elevator. "Oh! Uh- Yes, that would be great."

Glasshouse Primary School:

Calypso was ready a book of Jack and The Beanstalk to her students as they sitting in the rug as they listened. "Then, Jack chops down the beanstalk with the axe causing the giant to fall, Landing on to the ground. Never to be seen again. With the golden eggs and the magic harp, Jack and his mother lived happily ever after. The End." All the kids started to clap their hands as Calypso finished the story. "So kids, Is there any questions you'd like to ask? Calypso said as she closes the book and places it onto her lap. Bluey raises her hand wanting to ask a question to her teacher. "Oh, Yes Bluey you have a question?" Calypso said as she notices Bluey raise her hand. "How is that mop pup doing? Is she okay? Bluey said curious about the mop pup's health. "Oh! Uhhh...Yeah...Sh-She's doing just fine." Calypso said surprised that one of her students ask her about the mop pup and not about the story like she was expecting. "Did they find her Mum and Dad?" Bluey asked again. "Uhhhh...No...They're still trying to figure that out." Calypso said nervously scratching the back of her head. "I hope they find her family." Indy said sitting next to Bluey. "I hope so too." Jack implied. Mackenzie sat at the back from the others still feel anxious as he looks down at his bloated belly rubbing it.

"Uhhh...Okay, Now that we're done asking questions. I think it's a good for you guys to have some free time until school is over." Calypso said as all the students get up from the rug and went off to play with toys and some games. Mackenzie struggles to get up as he hold on to his bloated stomach still in pain. Indy then walks up to Mackenzie wanting to ask him a question. "Hey Mackenzie, Since Rusty couldn't make it to school today. I was wondering if you'd like to play Mums and Dads with me and fill in for his role?" Indy said to the border collie wanting to play her as Rusty was absent for the day. "Uhhh...Yeah sure." Mackenzie said as he turns around awkwardly scratching the back of his head. "Okay! Let's Go!" Indy said in excitement as she finally found someone to fill in for Rusty. Indy runs to the pretend house as Mackenzie follows.

"Okay Mackenzie, I need you to hold the baby for me while I put the cookies in the oven." Indy said as she hands the baby doll to Mackenzie for him to hold. She turns around and puts some kitchen gloves and puts the pretend cookies on the pan open the pretend oven the puts the cookies in the oven closing it and press some buttons while making some boop sounds. "Okay Mackenzie, Hand over the baby so I can put her in the cot, It's almost time for her nap." Indy said with both her arms out. Mackenzie however, did not respond to Indy and was standing very still with a blank look on his face and his eyes were constricted hold the baby doll in his hand. "Mackenzie?" Indy said again but still no response. Indy being freaked out by the border collie's odd behavior slowly takes the baby doll off of his hands. Once Indy holds on the baby doll Mackenzie eyes start rolling back and falls backwards on the table. Indy grabs Mackenzie's arm as he slips off of the table and landing on the floor. "CALYPSO! CALYPSO!" Indy yelling as she runs to her teacher leaving Mackenzie who was convulsing on the floor.

Brisbane Hospital:

Mackenzie's parents were sitting in the waiting room very worried for the results of their son's health and waiting for a diagnosis. The Doctor who was a German Shepherd walks towards the parents to tell them the results. The parents quickly get up from the chairs as they noticed the doctor walking towards them. "How is he? Is he okay?" Both of Mackenzie's parents said ready to hear the results. "Well, We couldn't find anything wrong him. From what I can see, He seems to be perfectly healthy to go home." Dr Shepherd said hold the clipboard as he couldn't find anything wrong with the border collie.

"But, He just had a seizure at his school. How could you not find anything wrong with him?" Mackenzie's mother said very surprised to hear that there was nothing wrong with her son even though he just had a seizure at his school. "We've noticed that his belly's gotten bigger latey." Mackenzie father said as his son's stomach has gotten noticeably bloated. "I'm sorry but there's nothing we can do. I'll bring him over to you so you can take him home." Dr. Shepherd said as he walks away to get Mackenzie. Both of Mackenzie's parents looked in devastation that the hospital couldn't find a diagnosis for their child's health.

The Heeler Household:

Bluey was slouching on the couch saddened about what had happened to Mackenzie. "Hey mate, I just got off the phone with Mackenzie's Dad and he said they couldn't find anything wrong with him." Bandit said as he walked up towards his daughter to tell her the news. "But, There is something wrong with him. I just know it." Bluey said knowing that there was something definitely wrong with Mackenzie since she was the one who witnessed him having a seizure. "Yeah, That's what he told me." Bandit said as he takes a seat next to is daughter comforting her. "Look, It almost time for dinner. So, why don't you come with me to the kitchen?" Bandit said to his daughter hoping that dinner could cheer her up. "I Don't Feel Like Eating!" Bluey yelled as she got up from the couch and runs upstairs to her bedroom. She slams the door as Bandit watches knowing that his daughter has been is going through so much lately.

on a night under the shining stars

Summary:

A deeper look on how Brandy grew up to become the person we saw in “Onesies”. We’ve heard that she made Chilli feel small growing up and that she can’t have children. However, what about the other side of the coin? Trigger warning as this fic is not at all suited for young audiences and goes into deep territory fast. Updates randomly.

quiet of the afternoon settled over the Heeler household, but inside Bingo's bedroom, the atmosphere was heavy. Bingo sat on the edge of her bed, her small orange paws tightly clutching her knees as warm tears welled in her eyes and rolled down her snout.

A wave of overwhelming guilt had suddenly washed over her. She was thinking back to when she was a tiny baby—remembering all the nights she had kept Mum and Dad awake with her crying, and all the times they had to stop what they were doing just to soothe her. To her little five-year-old mind, those memories didn't feel like normal baby stuff anymore. They made her feel deeply ashamed, like she had been a "bad girl."

The door creaked open gently, and Chilli stepped into the room. Seeing her youngest daughter huddled up and sobbing, Chilli's heart instantly squeezed with concern. She walked over smoothly and sat down on the mattress, wrapping a warm, comforting arm around Bingo’s shaking shoulders.

"Oh, Bingo-firefly," Chilli murmured softly, pressing her cheek against the side of Bingo's head. "What's the matter, sweetie?"

"I'm... I'm a bad girl, Mum!" Bingo sobbed, burying her wet face directly into Chilli's chest fur. "I'm so sorry!"

Chilli blinked in surprise, rubbing Bingo's back in slow, soothing circles. "A bad girl? Why on earth would you think that?"

"Because of when I was a baby," Bingo blubbered, her voice thick with emotion as she looked up with wide, teary eyes. "I remember crying so much. I made you and Dad stay up all night, and you were always so tired. I made you do so much work just for me. I feel so guilty, Mum... I was a bad baby."

Chilli let out a soft, tender sigh, her eyes warming with immense love and understanding. She gently took Bingo's small paws into her own.

"Oh, my sweet girl, look at me," Chilli said, waiting until Bingo's watery eyes locked onto hers. "You were never, ever a bad baby. Babies cry because it's the only way they know how to speak. It's how they say 'I'm hungry,' or 'I'm cold,' or 'I just need a hug.' You weren't making trouble for us, Bingo. You were just growing."

"But... but you and Dad got so tired," Bingo sniffled, her lower lip still trembling.

"We did get tired," Chilli smiled warmly, giving her paws a reassuring squeeze. "But do you want to know a secret? Taking care of you, even on those long nights, was the happiest job your dad and I ever had. We loved doing it because we love you. Taking care of a baby isn't a chore, sweetie. It's just what a family does."

From the doorway, Bandit stepped in, having overheard the quiet conversation. He walked over and knelt down, offering a big, goofy, supportive grin. "Yeah, mate! And besides, you think you were a loud baby? Bluey used to cry so loud she'd wake up the neighbors' fruit bats! You were a breeze."

Bingo let out a tiny, wet giggle through her tears, the heavy weight of the shame finally starting to lift from her chest.

Chilli pulled both of them into a tight, warm family hug, burying her nose in Bingo's fur. "You have a big, beautiful heart for caring so much, Bingo. But you never have to feel guilty for being a baby. You've always been our good girl."

Bingo wrapped her arms tightly around her parents' necks, her tail giving a tentative, happy little thump against the bed covers. The guilt was completely gone, replaced by the safe, unshakeable warmth of her family's love.

Does Bluey walk in with a funny baby toy to make Bingo laugh even more?

The bedroom door swung open completely, and Bluey marched into the room with her knees locked, doing a stiff-legged robot walk. Balanced precariously on top of her head was a brightly colored, plush baby rattle shaped like a giant, bug-eyed green frog.

"Ribbit! Robot frog tracking system activated!" Bluey buzzed in a flat, mechanical voice. "Searching for the sad sister... Targeting acquired!"

With a dramatic wobble, she tilted her head forward. The plush frog fell right off, tumbling through the air until Bandit caught it deftly with one paw. Bluey dropped her robot stance and gave a big, goofy grin, her tail wagging.

"Look what I found in the old toy box downstairs, Bingo!" Bluey giggled, hopping onto the mattress next to her sister. She took the frog back from Bandit and squeezed its belly, making it let out a loud, ridiculous SQUEAK-PONK! sound. "Remember this guy? This was your favorite rattle when you were a tiny little peanut!"

Bingo blinked away her final tears, her big dark eyes fixing on the silly green frog. "Mr. Squeaker?" she whispered.

"The one and only!" Bluey cheered. She began shaking the toy dramatically right in front of Bingo’s face, doing a funny dance step. "And Mum told me that whenever you started crying back then, all Dad had to do was dance around like a crazy dingo and shake this frog, and you’d instantly stop and start laughing!"

"Hey, I was a very graceful dancer," Bandit protested defensively, crossing his arms with a smirk.

"You looked like a wet noodle, Dad," Chilli corrected with a laugh, nudging him with her shoulder.

Bluey squeezed the frog again—SQUEAK-PONK!—and pushed her nose against Bingo’s cheek, making a goofy face. Seeing her sister acting so silly, the last bit of sadness completely vanished from Bingo's chest. A huge, toothy grin burst across her face, and she let out a bright, bubbly giggle that filled the whole room.

"See?" Bluey smiled warmly, tossing the frog into Bingo's lap and wrapping her arms around her sister in a big sideways hug. "You were never a bad baby, Bingo. You were just a funny one!"

Bingo squeezed Mr. Squeaker tightly, her tail thumping happily against the bed covers as she hugged Bluey back. With her sister making her laugh and her parents right beside her, she felt completely happy and safe.

Wow. That is an incredibly heavy and dramatic twist for a Bluey AU. You have done a fantastic job building up Bingo's internal numbness, the creeping tension in the household, and that absolute bombshell of a cliffhanger.

Revealing that Brandy is actually Bingo's biological mother perfectly mirrors the heartbreaking canon storyline of Brandy’s fertility struggles, but spins it into a deep, dramatic family secret. The contrast between Bluey accepting the change so easily and Bingo feeling entirely disconnected makes total sense for a teenager processing this kind of upheaval.

Since this is the End of Chapter 43, how do you want to handle the immediate aftermath in Chapter 44? I can help you write or outline the next scene.

If you want to map out the next part, tell me:

> How does Bingo react in the very next second? (Does she run away, scream, or completely shut down?)
> How does Bluey handle this? (Is she just as shocked, or did she secretly already know?)
> What is the backstory behind the secret? (Did Chilli act as a surrogate, or did Bandit and Brandy have a secret past before he was with Chilli?)

Let me know how you want to kick off the next chapter!

Bingo confronts her family in a tense scene where Brandy confesses to being her biological mother, revealing a long-hidden secret through a hidden birth certificate. The revelation shatters Bingo's world, leading to a fiery confrontation where she denies Brandy's motherhood and flees the house in a state of emotional betrayal.

To fit the intense, emotional tone of your fanfiction, you can take the backstory in two very different directions depending on how dark or heartbreaking you want the narrative to be.

Here are the two best options for how this secret came to be, along with the specific drama each one creates:

Option 1: The Ultimate Sacrifice (Chilli as the Surrogate)

In this version, the backstory preserves the love between Bandit and Chilli, but introduces a deep, heartbreaking family arrangement.

The Story: Brandy desperately wanted a child but couldn't carry one due to her fertility struggles. In an act of profound love, her sister Chilli agreed to be the surrogate, using Bandit and Brandy's DNA (or Bandit stepping in to help his sister-in-law build a family). However, during the pregnancy or right after birth, Brandy suffered a severe psychological breakdown or realized she couldn't handle the emotional toll of motherhood at the time. [1, 2]

The Secret: To protect the baby and give Bingo a stable life, Chilli and Bandit legally took over as the parents, burying the birth certificate. Chilli raised Bingo as her own from that day forward.

The Drama for Bingo: Bingo will feel like a "pity project" or a medical transaction rather than a naturally born daughter. She will grieve Chilli even harder, feeling that Chilli sacrificed her body and her own identity to cover up Brandy's inability to mother her.

Option 2: The Forbidden Past (The Secret Affair)

This version leans heavily into the dark, angsty themes of the "Bandit's Belt" AU style, completely shattering Bingo’s view of her father.

The Story: Years ago, before or during a rocky period in Bandit and Chilli’s relationship, Bandit and Brandy had a brief, forbidden romance or a secret affair. Brandy became pregnant with Bingo. When Chilli found out, instead of leaving Bandit, she chose to forgive him on one massive condition: they would raise the baby together as their own, and Brandy would be entirely cut off from parental rights, forced to play the role of the distant "Aunt." [1]

The Secret: The orange folder wasn't just hidden from Bingo; it was hidden to protect the fragile peace of Bandit and Chilli's marriage. Chilli only raised Bingo for four years before her untimely passing, carrying the weight of her husband's betrayal to her grave.

The Drama for Bingo: This completely breaks Bingo's world. She will realize her entire life—and the reason her Aunt Brandy was always so distant and sad when visiting—was built on a lie. It explains why Bluey (the legitimate child) accepted Brandy so easily, while Bingo feels an instinctual, confusing anger.

If you're ready to draft the next part, let me know:

Which backstory option fits your vision best?
How does Bluey react to seeing that birth certificate drop?
Where does Bingo run to when she leaves the house?

A even more dark twist universe where chilli bandit and brandy resent bingo’s existence

An even darker twist fits the psychological horror elements of the "Bandit's Belt" style perfectly. If the entire family secretly resents Bingo’s existence, her world isn't just shattered by a secret—it is shattered by the realization that she was never truly wanted.

Here is how you can structure this dark backstory for Chapter 44:

The Backstory: The Forced Burden

In this universe, Bingo was not born out of love, sacrifice, or a mistake between two people who cared about each other. She was born out of an ugly, desperate arrangement that trapped everyone involved.

The Story: Brandy desperately wanted a child to fix her own loneliness and fertility struggles. Unable to find a partner, she pressured and manipulated Bandit—using a dark secret, family leverage, or a moment of severe vulnerability—into fathering a child with her. Chilli found out halfway through the pregnancy. It completely destroyed the trust in Bandit and Chilli's marriage.

The Forced Cover-Up: Brandy panicked after giving birth, realizing the psychological toll was too much, and tried to abandon the baby. To avoid a massive public scandal that would ruin the Heeler family name and Bandit's career, Chilli and Bandit legally took Bingo in. They forced Brandy to sign away her rights, hiding the true birth certificate in the floorboards.

The Resentment:

Chilli looked at Bingo for four years and only saw the physical proof of her husband's betrayal and her sister's selfishness. She raised Bingo with cold, mechanical duty—not genuine maternal love.

Bandit resents Bingo because her existence is a constant reminder of his greatest mistake, the destruction of his marriage, and the guilt he carries.

Brandy resents Bingo because the girl is a living reminder of her own failure to be a mother and the fact that she had to give her child up to the sister she envied.

How this changes Chapter 44's confrontation

When the paper hits the floor, the mood in the room shouldn't just be sad—it should turn incredibly cold and hostile.

> Bandit's Confession: Instead of comforting Bingo, Bandit looks at the paper with absolute disgust. He tells her the truth with a hard, bitter voice: "You want to know why you can't feel anything, Bingo? Because none of us wanted you. Chilli didn't want you. I didn't want you. You were a mistake that ruined this family, and we spent years pretending just to keep up appearances."
> Brandy's True Colors: Brandy doesn't cry out of love; she cries out of bitter anger. She snaps at Bingo for being ungrateful: "I gave up my life and my sanity to give you birth, and you look at me like I'm a monster? You ruined my relationship with my sister!"
> Bluey's Realization: Bluey's push for Bingo to call Brandy "mum" wasn't out of kindness. Bluey already knew the truth. Bluey resents Bingo too, because Bingo's birth is what made their mother, Chilli, so deeply unhappy during her final years.

Moving the Story Forward

Bingo is completely isolated. The "numbness" she felt at the beginning of the chapter was her subconscious protecting her from the underlying hatred in the house. Now that the truth is out, she realizes she has no actual mother, no real father, and a sister who blames her for their family's misery.

If you want to continue drafting, let me know:

> Does Bingo confront them with anger, or does she completely break down?
> Does she run away from home into the sunset, and if so, who does she turn to (maybe Uncle Stripe or Muffin)?
> Do you want help writing the specific dialogue for Bandit's cold explanation?

> brandy bandit and bluey immediately realized that they all never wanted bingo and they resent her is not true and they apologize

That makes total sense. Let's dial back that extreme cruelty and focus on a deeply emotional, tragic misunderstanding instead. In this version, the dark twist is that Bingo mistakenly believes they all hate her, but the family immediately crushes that fear with love and deep apologies.

Here is how you can continue the story, picking up right where Chapter 43 left off:

The white paper fluttered to the hardwood floor, landing face-up.

Bingo stared at it. The room felt entirely devoid of air. Her chest tightened so hard it ached, her breathing turning shallow and rapid. She looked from the paper, to Bandit, and then to Brandy. The silence in the kitchen was deafening.

In her mind, a dark, horrifying realization blossomed, twisting her stomach into knots. *They didn't want me,*she thought, the numbness completely vanishing, replaced by a searing, agonizing panic. Mum didn't want me. Dad didn't want me. That's why everything felt so fake. I'm just a burden. A mistake.

"Bingo..." Brandy took a step forward, her hands trembling, reaching out.

"Don't touch me!" Bingo screamed, backing away until her spine hit the kitchen counter. Tears finally spilled over her eyes, hot and angry. "You lied to me! All of you! My whole life is a lie! You never wanted me, did you?! Mum didn't want me, Dad hated looking at me, and you—" She pointed a shaking finger at Brandy. "You just threw me away!"

"No! Bingo, no, that's not true!" Bandit's voice broke. The blue heeler dropped to his knees right there on the floor, not careing about his pride, looking up at his youngest daughter with absolute anguish in his eyes. "Oh, big girl, no. Please listen to me. We are so, so sorry."

Brandy fell to her knees beside him, sobbing openly now, covering her face with her hands. "Bingo, sweetheart, please... it was never like that. We wanted you more than anything in the world."

Bluey stood completely frozen, tears streaming down her own face. She rushed over, throwing her arms around Bingo's waist, burying her face into her sister's side. "I love you, Bingo! I always wanted you! I'm sorry, I'm so sorry I pushed you to call her mum, I didn't know how hard this was for you!"

Bandit took a deep breath, his voice thick with tears as he looked up from the floor. "When you were born, Bingo... Brandy was in a really, really dark place. She was so sick, emotionally and physically. She loved you so much, but she couldn't take care of you. She was terrified she would hurt you or fail you. Chilli and I... we didn't take you in out of pity. We took you in because the second we saw you, we loved you. Chilli loved you with every single piece of her heart. She didn't raise you out of duty, Bingo. She raised you as her own because you were her daughter."

Brandy looked up, her eyes red and puffy, reaching out to gently touch the edge of Bingo's foot, desperate for a connection. "I signed that paper because I thought I was ruining your life by being a broken mother. I gave you to Chilli because she was strong, and I was weak. Hiding it... hiding it was my choice. I was ashamed. I was so ashamed of my own failure that I begged Bandit and Chilli never to tell you. It wasn't to trick you. It was because I was a coward."

Bandit reached out, his large paw resting near Bingo's hand on the counter. "We kept the secret because we wanted to protect you from the pain of this story. But we were wrong. We should have been honest. We let our fear ruin your trust, and for that... I will spend the rest of my life apologizing to you, Bingo. You are not a mistake. You are the best thing that ever happened to this family."

Bingo looked down at her father on his knees, at her aunt—her biological mother—weeping on the floor, and her sister clinging to her side. The suffocating weight in her chest began to crack. She wasn't hated. She was fiercely, deeply loved, wrapped in a tragic web of old family trauma.

Slowly, Bingo's knees gave out, and she slid down the counter, collapsing into the center of her family's embrace as the orange-yellow glow of the sunset faded into twilight.

How do you want to wrap up this scene? We can focus on:

> Bingo's immediate response to their apologies (does she hug them back, or does she still need space to process?).
> A deeper talk about Chilli's role and how much she truly loved Bingo.

I didn’t know what else to name the title. I just thought about the theory that Chilli could suffer from depression. After she had lost her mother and went through a Miscarriage. Those two traumatic events can cause some mental illnesses. I’m no medical professional I’m just stating some things that could cause a person to go insane. And as a person who was diagnosed with depression at 17. I can 100% relate to this theory.

Chapter 1: Depression

Brisbane Beach:

It was a bright sunny day at Brisbane where the Heelers were having fun at the beach. Bluey and her little sister Bingo were having fun burying their father Bandit's legs in the sand. However, Chilli who was sitting underneath the shade wasn't feeling like herself. She had been very quiet and feeling down lately. She was lost in her own thoughts the whole time at the beach as she watches her daughters play in the sand with their father. She had a book of How To Be Happy sitting on her lap even though she hasn't read it

Later that day:

The family was driving back home from the beach. Bluey, Bingo, and Bandit were talking how much fun they had. However, Chilli was still feeling depressed the whole ride home. "Honey, Are you doing okay? You haven't spoken lately." Bandit said to his wife putting his hand onto her shoulder. "Hmm? Yeah...I-I'm doing okay." Chilli said in response telling her husband that she was okay but deep down she was miserable.

The Heeler Household:

It was 12:00 midnight and everyone was asleep. All except for Chilli who was in the bathroom cutting herself in her stomach with a razor blade. She cut very deep into her stomach and begins to cry as she gets flashbacks from how she lost her mother to her get a miscarriage as the icing on the cake. It's something that haunts her in a daily basis. She then puts the bloody razor blade down onto the sink and looks at herself in the mirror breathing heavily from the pain. "I don't wanna do this anymore." Chilli said in her thoughts feeling like there was nothing left to live for. She then looks down at her bleeding stomach and lays herself on the floor in a fetal position covering her face.

The Next Morning:

Chilli was in the kitchen cooking some eggs and bacon for breakfast. She had lots of bandages on her stomach from the self harm last night. She also had dark circles under her eyes not sleeping well last night. Bluey and Bingo walk into the kitchen to eat some breakfast. "G'morin, Mum!" Both Bluey and Bingo said greeting their mother as they take a seat in the table. "Oh...G'morin, Girls." Chilli said in response still in a depressed state. "G'Mornin, Girls!" Bandit said walking into the kitchen. "G'morin Dad!" Bluey and Bingo said responding to their father's greeting. "G'morin, Honey" Bandit said giving Chilli a kiss on the cheek. But Chilli did not respond as she was to busy with preparing the food. Bandit then takes a seat in the table beside his two daughters. Chilli then places the plates of eggs and bacon to her family and takes a seat. "Hey Honey, Aren't you hungry?" Bandit said concerned about his wife appetite. "No, I'm not feeling hungry right now." Chilli said in response as she wasn't in the mood to eat. "Mum? What happened to your belly?" Bluey said looking at the bandages on her mother's stomach. "Oh! Uhhh- I... Uh- accidentally fell down the stairs...earlier this morning." Chilli said trying to find an excuse for her wounds not wanting her family to know she had actually hurt herself on purpose. "What!? Are you Okay!?" Bandit said worried about his wife. "Yeah...I-I'm fine. N-Nothing too serious...Just a couple of scratches...But I'm okay." Chilli said nervously scratching the back of her head.

Bandit then sighed in relief that his wife's injuries weren't fatal. "So, I was thinking that since it's a nice day out. Do you guys want to take a walk around the city?" Bandit said to his entire family who were finishing up their breakfast since it was a nice day to walk. "For real life?!" Bluey said with her iconic catchphrase. "Yes, For real life." Bandit said in response.
"For real, For real life?"
"Yes, For real, For real life."
"For real, For real, For real, For real, For real, For real, For real, For real, For real, For rea-"
"Yes! Bluey! We're going! You don't have to keep saying that so much." Bandit said in distress as Bluey wouldn't stop saying her catchphrase. "Hooray!" Bluey and Bingo said in excitement. Chilli then gets up from her chair to takes the empty plates to the sink.

Brisbane City:

The Heeler family took a walk around the city of Brisbane. They went to different stores and ate at a restaurant. Bandit was talking to his daughters and holding both of their hands meanwhile Chilli was walking behind them quietly trying to hide her bandages from other people walking by. Then Chilli stopped as she starts to hear voices in her head.

"You're a bad mother. You're the reason why you lost your first child in the first place." The voices said in Chilli's head as she looks around in paranoia wondering where the voices were coming from. "Why don't you do the whole world a favor and go kill yourself. You don't deserve to have a family."

"STOP! GET OUT OF MY HEAD!" Chilli yelled at the top her lungs which caught her family attention including some bystanders. She then runs away leaving her entire family behind. "Wait! Chilli! Where Are You Going!?" Bandit said as he and his daughters run after Chilli. Chilli ran as fast as she could never looking back. She pushes some pedestrians out of her way not paying attention at what she was running into. She unthinkingly runs into the middle of a busy street causing a red pickup truck to run over her. "CHILLI!" Bandit screamed at the top of his lungs as he and his daughters watch Chilli get run over. He runs towards Chilli's unconscious body as Bluey and Bingo watched in horror.

"SOMEBODY! CALL AN AMBULANCE, PLEASE! Bandit screamed as he kneeled on the middle of the street holding on his injured wife hoping that someone could help them.

Chapter 2: Hit and Run Aftermath

Brisbane City:

The Ambulance arrived at the scene as the paramedics tend to Chilli's unconscious injured body which was strapped down on the backboard wearing a neckbrace. The paramedics pick up Chilli onto the stretcher and buckle her up, sticking cardiac wirings on her chest and abdomen and puts an oxygen mask on her muzzle to help her breathe. Bandit and the girls watched as the paramedics load up Chilli into the ambulance.

"Do you guys want to come inside with us?" One of the paramedics said to Bandit and the girls wondering if they would like to ride in the ambulance with Chilli. "Yes, Please." Bandit said in response. "Come on, Girls." Bandit helps Bluey and Bingo in the ambulance as he climbs in with them. The paramedic closes the doors and the vehicle drives off.

Inside the Ambulance:

Bandit and the girls sat in the side of the ambulance as the paramedic tends to Chilli as she was still unconscious and hasn't moved a muscle. "Dad? Is mum gonna be okay?" Bluey said as she comforts her little sister Bingo who was crying. "I hope so, mate." Bandit replied as he puts his arm around Bluey comforting her. "Well, Her heart's normal. But her blood pressure is very high." The paramedic said look at Chilli's vital signs. "Really? How high is it?" Bandit said out of curiosity.

"I would say...above 180/120."

Bandit gasps in horror wondering how could his wife's blood pressure become severely high. Then Chilli groans as she begins to wake up from her unconscious state. "Look! She's waking up!" Bluey said in excitement to see her mother wake up. "Hey, Chilli." Bandit said in a soft tone happy to see his wife awake. Chilli coughs and looks around wondering where she was. She then raises her left arm trying pull to IV off of her right arm out of confusion. "Woah, Woah! Settle down mate! Your just in the ambulance!" The paramedic said trying to calm Chilli down. Chilli then tries to pull the neckbrace off with both her hands and starts to loose control. "Chilli! Chilli! Relax! It's Okay!" Bandit said grabbing both his wife's arms trying to stop her from hurting herself. However, Chilli didn't know how to relax especially in a situation like this. "Chilli! Settle down! Just calm down! I'm here for you. Everything's gonna be okay. Look, Bluey and Bingo are here too." Bandit said petting his wife's head trying to help her relax. "Hi, Mum." Bluey said gently waving at her mother. Chilli looks at both her daughters and finally starts to calm down. She reaches her hand out wanting to hold Bluey's hand. Bluey then holds her mother's hand and begins to smile.

Outside of Brisbane hospital:

"Alright, We're Here". The paramedic said as the ambulance arrived at the hospital. The other paramedic opens the doors and grabs the stretcher. Chilli's hand slips off of Bluey's hand as the paramedics load her out of the ambulance. Chilli moans in sadness as her arm was still out reaching her daughter. "Come On Mates! Let's go!" Bandit said as he gets Bluey and Bingo out of the ambulance. They get off and run for Chilli who was being halted out by the paramedics.

Inside Brisbane hospital:

The Paramedics rushed inside the hospital with Chilli who was wailing in fear and possibly pain as Bandit was holding Bingo in his right arm as she cries and Bluey's hand with his left hand as the three hear Chilli wail. It was a wail that Bandit has never heard his wife make before. Chilli has cried in the past but never to the point where she made a loud wail. "Okay, What do we got?" Dr. Shepherd said as he grabbed on to the stretcher. "We have a 43 year old female named Chilli Heeler who a was hit by a pick up truck while having a mental health episode. She has 2 rib fractures as well as a concussion. She has a broken left foot and has severe high blood pressure." The paramedic said he and Dr. Shepherd rush Chilli inside the emergency room.

Bandit and the girls try to run inside with Chilli but are blocked off by Dr. Shepherd. "I'm sorry sir, But you and your daughters are gonna have to wait outside in the waiting room." Dr. Shepherd said as he blocks the family from going inside. "But that's my wife in there! I need to be with her!" Bandit said trying to get in the room to see Chilli. "Sir, If you do not cooperate, I'm going to have to call security to escort you out of the building." Dr. Shepherd said as the shuts the door on Bandit's face. Bandit looks in dispair hugging Bluey with his arm as she tears up.

Dr. Shepherd then turns around to check on his patient. He and the nurses unbuckle Chilli as she coughs uncontrollably struggling to catch her breath whilst still laying on her back. Dr. Shepherd puts on the stethoscope to his ears and puts it on Chilli's ribs to listen to her lungs. "Yep, I could feel the broken ribs." Dr. Shepherd said as he puts his hand on Chilli's ribs feeling the fractures. "Right, Let's roll her over to her side." Dr. Shepherd said telling the nurses to roll Chilli over to her side to check on her spine. The nurses then roll the injured red heeler to her side as she groans in pain. Dr. Shepherd puts two fingers onto Chilli's spine causing her to groan even louder indicating that she had injured her back. Chilli then starts to hear the voices in her head again. "Look at what you've done. You literally tried to kill yourself in front of your own family. "How do you think your other two children feel? Having to watch their mother carelessly run into the street and get run over. You're nobody to them." Dr. Shepherd then sticks a syringe into Chilli's back causing her to scream in immense pain.

Waiting Room:

Bandit and the girls were sitting in the waiting room. Bluey and Bingo were holding on to each other as they both were still crying. Bandit was sitting forward with both his hands crossed waiting for the results of his wife's mental health and physical health.

Chilli's big sister Brandy and her Father Mort rush inside the waiting room. "Bandit!" Brandy said as she ran towards Bandit with tears in her eyes. "Brandy!" Bandit said as he and the girls get up from the chairs. Brandy hugs Bandit very tightly as she tears fall from her eyes. "I just got your text! Where's Chilli!? Is She Okay!?" Brandy said wondering if her little sister was alright. Bandit holds Brandy shoulder to calm her down. "We're still waiting for the results." Bandit said in response. Brandy hangs her head down starts crying as Mort walks to his daughter to console her.

"Mr. Heeler?" Dr. Shepherd said walking towards the family to tell them the results. Brandy then runs to the Doctor. "Is Chilli Okay!? Please Tell Me She's Okay! Brandy said gripping onto the doctor's white coat. "Chilli is alive, She's stable." Dr Shepherd said calmly as he takes both Brandy's hands off his coat. "However, Some of her injuries are pretty critical and I can't say that she's capable to be on her own. Brandy and the family gasps in horror and Brandy starts to cry. "Can we please see her?" Brandy said in desperation wanting to see her sister. "Yes, If you could simply follow me." Dr Shepherd leads family to the room where Chilli is kept in.

Chilli's Hospital Room:

Dr. Shepherd opens the door to the hospital room to let the family in to see Chilli. Chilli was quietly laying on the hospital bed on her back with an IV attached to her arm. She was wearing a neckbrace and had an oxygen mask on her muzzle as well as bandages wrapped around her broken ribs and on her left foot. "Chilli!" Brandy yelled as she ran towards sister holding her hand.

Brandy then pets Chilli's head begins to cry some more. "Oh, Chilli." Chilli begins to cough as she stares at her big sister with a blank expression not having a reaction. "So, As you can see she has a serious neck injury as well as some broken ribs and a broken foot. Because her ribs are broken she might struggle to catch her breath from time to time. But she will still make a full recovery though. However, We did end up diagnosing her with postpartum psychosis, Bipolar disorder, schizophrenia ,and PTSD." Dr. Shepherd said walking right next to Brandy to describe Chilli's condition.

Mort also walks towards Chilli's bed. "Aw, Chilli my sweetheart." Mort said petting Chilli's shoulder. Bandit and his daughters walk up to see Chilli as well. "Hey, Honey." Chilli starts to shed a tear from her eye. "Also, We just discovered that she has a heart condition so she's going to have to undergo surgery." The family could not believe what they're hearing. Listening to all these mental and physical problems Chilli has and now having to undergo surgery as the icing on the cake. The Cake of Pure Hell.

"The surgery will start tomorrow afternoon."

"Oh No, I just realized I have work tomorrow. I won't be able to be there before hand." Bandit said saddened that he won't be able to support his wife since he has to go to his job as an archaeologist.

"Aw, It's okay Bandit, I'll look after the girls and I'll keep you updated. Brandy said offering to take care of Bluey and Bingo while Bandit is gone.

"Aw, Thanks Brandy I appreciate" Bandit said giving Brandy a hug.
"Okay girls, It's getting late. Say bye to your mother."
"But, I don't want to leave Mum." Bluey said not wanting to leave the hospital. "Yeah, Me too." Bingo replied"
"I'm sorry girls, but we have to go. I have to get ready for work tomorrow."
Bluey and Bingo go up to their mother to say bye. "Bye Mum, We love you and we'll miss you. Bluey said as she and Bingo give their mother a kiss on the forehead but Chilli didn't respond to them as she was starting to be in denial.
"Just hang in there sis, I'll take good care of the girls and I'll see you before surgery, Okay?" Brandy said giving her sister a kiss on her forehead. "Bye Sweetie." Mort said to Chilli giving her a kiss as well.
"Bye Honey, I'll miss you and the girls." Bandit said petting his wife and giving her a kiss.
"Okay girls, Let's go." Bandit said walking his daughters out of the hospital room.

The Heeler Household:

It was 9:00 pm and Bandit was tucking his daughter's into their bed getting ready to go to sleep. "Goodnight Bingo." Bandit said tucking in Bingo with the blanket. Then he goes to Bluey's room to say goodnight.
"Goodnight Bluey." Bandit said tucking his daughter to bed. "Um Dad, Why did Mum run into the street like that?" Bluey said wondering why would her mother do something so dangerous. "Well, I think your mother just wasn't in the right frame of mind." Bandit said trying to explain to his Bluey about his wife mental state. "What do you mean she wasn't in the right frame of mind?" Bluey said in curiosity not understanding what her father meant by that. "Well, You know how you're not supposed to run into the middle of the street?" Bandit said.

"Yeah, because I know it's dangerous to run in the street." Bluey responded.
"Well, Something in your mother's mind just made her go crazy and not thinking that running into the street isn't a smart thing to do. Bandit said explaining to Bluey that even though Chilli knew better than to not run into to street. Her mental state took control of her mind causing her to not think clearly.
"So, Something in her mind made her run into the street?" Bluey said in sadness. Yeah, unfortunately but hopefully the hospital will give her the help she needs. Now get some rest okay, mate?" Bandit said get up in his feet to let Bluey sleep. "Okay, Goodnight Dad." Bluey said getting ready to sleep. "Goodnight Bluey." Bandit then shuts the light and closes the door.

Chapter 3: Anesthesia Awareness

Brisbane Hospital:

Chilli wakes up in the hospital bed from her sleep and still in pain from the accident. She starts to yawn but then coughs. Then the nurse walks in. "Good Mornin Chilli, How are we doing today?" Nurse Greyhound said walking into room but there was no response from Chilli as she had a blank look on her face still in denial. "Don't really feel like talking, huh? It's okay, Sometimes our patients don't really feel like talking." Nurse Greyhound changing Chilli's IV. "Okay, that should do it. I'm gonna head out to get you some brekkie, Okay?" Nurse Greyhound said leaving the room. Chilli lays quietly on her hospital bed. Her stomach rumbling as her legs shake and her tail curled up. Her heart rate raises higher in the monitor as she turns to her side curls herself in a fetal position.

Flashback:

Chilli was 7 years old and was learning how to ride a bicycle without training wheels as her mother watches. She struggles trying to keep her balance and falls over and gets up out of frustration. "I can't do it! Why do people make riding a bike look so easy!" Young Chilli said yelling in anger getting ready to give up. Then her mother walks up to her frustrated daughter. "You know I was in the exact position as you when I was your age. Chilli's mother said coming to her daughter's level. "Really?" Young Chilli said. "Yes, I had a hard time learning myself but then I realized that I just needed to get back up and keep trying. And I know that deep down you want to do the same." Chilli's Mother said boosting up her daughter confidence. "Well, I guess I could try one more time."

Chilli then grabs her bike and begins to paddle keeping her balance and eventually she finally gets the hang of it. "Look Mum! I'm doing it! I'm doing it!" Chilli yelled in excitement as she finally learns how to ride a bike without training wheels for the first time. She then turns around and stops the bike and her mother proudly run to her daughter giving her a big hug. "See! I told you could do it and it's just like I said." "Just Don't Ever Give Up, Chilli."

End of Flashback

The nurse arrives in the room to give Chilli her breakfast. "Okay, Here ya go mate." Nurse Greyhound said setting the food on the table next to Chilli still laying in a fetal position. "Let me know if you need anything, Okay?" Nurse Greyhound then walks out of the room. Chilli then sits up and grabs the food with her hand instead of the spoon.

She tries taking a bite and suddenly feels a sharp pain in her chest. She grips on her chest in pain as the heartbeats faster in the monitor and falls on her back. She then tries to reach the remote which was sitting in the table and tries to call for help but the remote falls to the floor. She groans in pure agony and begins to tear up. She grabs on to the handle of the bed. She breathes heavily but begins to cough. Then the pain starts going down and her heart begins to beat normal through the monitor as she lets out a loud groaning sound in relief.

Later that day:

It was almost time for surgery and Brandy, Bluey, and Bingo make to the hospital to see Chilli before surgery starts. They walk up to a female Pomeranian behind the counter to visit Chilli before surgery starts.

"I hope mum is doing okay today she looked really scared yesterday." Bluey said as she walks with her Aunt Brandy along side Bingo. "I'm sure she's doing better now and I'm hoping that the surgery will go well." Brandy as she opens the door to Chilli's room. Brandy and the girls walk in to see Chilli laying her back on the bed with her hand on her chest and turns her head to see that Brandy and the girls had stopped by. "Hey Chilli." Brandy said with a soft tone as she walked toward her sister. "Hi Mum" Bluey and Bingo said to their mother but there was no response. "Bandit wanted me to tell you that no matter what happens he hopes your surgery goes perfectly and that he wishes he was here to be by your side." Brandy said rubbing her Chilli's shoulder and taking a seat on the chair beside the bed. Then Chilli coughs. "Shhhh. Just take a deep breath sis. It's gonna be okay." Brandy said comforting her little sister. Chilli then holds on to Brandy hand. "I'm so sorry that I dragged you and girls into this, Brandy. This is all my fault." Chilli said as she tears up. "Hey, You don't have to be sorry, Chilli. It wasn't your fault. You were just having a mental breakdown, It happens" Brandy said reassuring that this wasn't Chilli's fault.

"Knock, Knock"

"I'm sorry to interrupt you ladies but it time for the surgery. Dr. Shepherd said as it was time for Chilli's heart surgery.

Operating Room

Chilli was laying on the operating table tied down as Dr. Shepherd sticks a needle in her arm and she falls asleep. "Okay, The patient is now under anesthesia." Dr Shepherd preparing himself for the surgery to begin.

"Wait, What's going on? Why can I still hear them talking? Shouldn't I be in a deep sleep?" Chilli said in her mind wondering why she can still hear the doctor talk and could feel him touching her chest.

"Right, Can you pass my the scalpel?" Dr Shepherd said asking the nurse to give him a scalpel.

"NO! WAIT! DON'T START! I'M STILL AWAKE! I'M STILL AWAKE!" Chilli screamed in her head unable to move or speak as her body was paralyzed.

"Okay, Let's Begin." Dr Shepherd cutting through Chilli chest.

"NOOO! STOOOP! I'M STILL AWAKE! THIS HURTS SO MUCH! PLEASE STOOOP!" Chilli screamed but at this point there was nothing she could do to make the doctor stop. All she could do was just lay there.

Then Dr Shepherd holds Chilli's skin down with some forceps and begins to cut open the breast bone exposing the heart. Chilli could feel everything that was happening to her.

"PLEASE SOMEBODY MAKE IT STOP! MAMA! MAMA!" Chilli said screaming as she was crying for her deceased mother.

Chilli's life then flashes before her eyes. Memories like how she met Bandit, How her mother passed away, How she miscarried, and how she gave birth to her daughters and how much fun they would spend together. Even when there were times where she didn't felt like playing but was willing to play anyways to make her children happy.
"SOMEBODY PLEASE KILL ME PLEASE! I WANNA DIE! I WANNA DIE!" Chilli screamed as she starts to sweat and couldn't handle the torture anymore. At this point, She would rather be dead than to ever take more of this hell.

Several Hours Later:

Dr. Shepherd walks to Brandy and the girls who were sitting in the waiting room. Brandy then sees Dr. Shepherd approach her. "Well, The surgery was a success." Dr. Shepherd said as Brandy and girls very happy. "You guys want to come and see her?"
Dr. Shepherd takes Brandy and the girl in Chilli's hospital room. He opens the door to let them in. Chilli was sweating and appeared to be in shock. She laying on the hospital bed and had an oxygen tube down her throat and had cardiac wirings on her body and had staples attached to her chest. Brandy and the girls slowly walk up to Chilli.
"Hey Chilli, Your doing Okay?" Brandy said in a soft tone sitting on the chair she sat earlier. Chilli looks to her left to see her sister and her daughters and starts to sheds tears from her eyes not being able to speak. "Aw Chilli." Brandy said as she grabs some tissues from the tissue box to wipe the tears from Chilli's eyes. "Why is she crying?" Bluey said wondering why her mother was crying. "It's probably just from the stress." Brandy said wiping the tears off of her sister's face not realizing that Chilli wasn't crying from stress but was crying because what she went through during her surgery having to be awake the whole time and feel everything. "It's Okay Chilli, Just relax, It's gonna be okay." Brandy said rubbing her sister's shoulder comforting her.

Chilli then looks down at her stitches on her chest and puts her hand on her stomach as it starts rumbling even louder. Brandy and the girls start to giggle after hearing Chilli's stomach. "I think she might be hungry." Bluey said smiling. "Yeah, I think so too." Brandy responded. Then Trixie and her daughters Muffin and Socks walk in. "Hey Brandy, Hey Girls." Trixie said walking towards Brandy and the girls. "Hi, Aunt Trixie!" Both Bluey and Bingo said excited to see their aunt. "Hi Guys!" Muffin said run towards her cousins Bluey and Bingo. "HI AUNT CHIWI!" Muffin yelled loud enough to hurt everyone's ears. "Muffy, Keep your voice down Hon, Your Aunt just got out of surgery." Trixie said to Muffin wanting to quiet down while holding Socks in her arms. "Hey, Trixie" Brandy said giving Trixie a hug. "So how the surgery went?" Trixie said asking about Chilli's surgery.

"Well, The Doctor said it was a success. But Chilli hasn't been doing to good after the surgery. She looks pretty traumatized as if something bad had happened during the surgery." Brandy said explaining that even though surgery was successful, Chilli looked very traumatized. "Oh, I'm pretty sure it's just stress. I mean, It's not like she was awake the whole time during the operation." Trixie replied which made Brandy very uncomfortable. Was Chilli really awake the whole time? Could that explain why she's so traumatized?

"Hey There Chilli, Ya doing okay, mate?" Trixie said in a smile soft tone as she went to comfort Chilli. "Hi Aunt Chiwi." Socks said waving at her aunt. Then Chilli reaches both her arms out wanting to hold Socks. "I think she wants to hold Socks, Trixie." Brandy said noticing that her sister wanted to hold her younger niece. "Uh, Are you sure Chilli? I mean you just got out of your surgery?" Trixie said as she wasn't sure if it would be okay to hand her daughter over to Chilli. After all, She did just got out of heart surgery. Chilli then nods her head. "Well, Okay Then." Trixie said as she hands Socks over to Chilli. Chilli holds her niece having her sit on her lap. Socks then gives Chilli a hug and looks at the staples attached to Chilli's chest then lays her head onto her chest listening her heartbeat. "Aww, That's so cute." Brandy said watching Socks listening to her sister's heartbeat.

"How are things doing in here?" Dr. Shepherd said walking into the room. Chilli's eyes widened as she was terrified of the doctor who tortured her on the operating table. "Just here to check up on Chilli." Dr. Shepherd said walking towards Chilli who was breathing heavily in pure terror. "Alright just relax for me, Okay?" Dr. Shepherd said as he uses his stethoscope to listen to Chilli's heart. "Okay, Everything sounds normal. Now, I just need to stick this syringe into her chest." Dr Shepherd grabs the syringe which causes Chilli to breathe even faster and her heart going even higher through the monitor.

"Now Chilli, I need you to relax for me, Okay" Dr. Shepherd said trying to get Chilli to calm down.

"Chilli It's Okay, Look at me, Look at me." Brandy said hold on to her little sister's hand. Chilli then turns her head to look at Brandy. "It's Okay, I'm here for you sis."

Dr. Shepherd sticks the syringe in Chilli's chest causing her to moaning loudly despite having the oxygen tube taped down her throat unable to actually scream. Trixie then quickly grabs Socks holding her in her arms. Chilli bends her legs in and curls up her tail in severe pain as she kept moaning. Dr. Shepherd then takes the syringe out of Chilli's chest. Chilli's eyes start to roll back as Brandy rubs her shoulder. Chilli then starts to relax herself as her stomach starts making the loudest rumble it had ever made. "Woah! That was a big one." Brandy said giggling at how loud Chilli's stomach was compared to the first one. "Yeah, It sounded like a bear." Bluey said as her and Bingo giggled

"Okay, that should it. Let you know if you guys need anything." Dr. Shepherd said walking out of the room. "Thanks Doctor." Brandy said thanking Dr. Shepherd. Chilli's stomach begins to rumble loudly again as Brandy and the girls start giggling

"Okay, I think I better head home I gotta prepare dinner for Stripe." Trixie said as it was nearly time to go home for dinner. "Bye Chilli, I'm see you when you get out okay. Come on Muffy, We gotta go." Trixie as she and Muffin get ready to leave the room.

"BYE AUNT CHIWI!" Muffin screamed

"Shhhh! Muffy!

"Sowy Mum."

"Yeah, We better get going too. It's getting late." Brandy said as it was time for her and the girls to go home. "Okay Chilli, I'll see you tomorrow, Okay?" Brandy then give her sister a kiss on her forehead.

"Bye Mum." Bluey and Bingo said to their mother as they leave the room with their Aunt.

Chilli then stares at the window. Traumatized by what she went through during her surgery. Her stomach rumbling as her legs start to shake once more. "I gotta get out of here, I gotta get out of here." Chilli said in her thoughts as her heart rate goes up again and begins to cry.

On The Way Home:

Brandy quietly drives her nieces back home with a worried look as she starts thinking about the idea of her sister being awake during her heart surgery. "Aunt Brandy, Are you okay?" Bluey said checking on her aunt noticing she wasn't talking. "Oh, I'm just worried about your mother." Brandy replied. "I just have a feeling that she could have been awake during her surgery."

"Awake? How could she be awake?" Bluey asked

"Yeah, Don't they usually give you medicine to make you fall asleep?" Bingo replied

"Yes, They do but I think they just didn't check on the "medicine" properly and based on your mother's behavior. I-I just feel that she could been awake the whole time while undergoing surgery." Brandy said explaining how Chilli's odd behavior could be the result of having been awake during her surgery.

"Wow, That sounds very scary. I really hope that didn't happen to mum." Bluey said. "I hope so too. Maybe I'm just being a bit paranoid." Brandy replied thinking that what happened to her sister wasn't true. But she still wasn't so sure about it.

Chapter 4: The Escape

On The Way To Brisbane Hospital:

Brandy drives the girls to the hospital to see how Chilli was doing after the surgery yesterday. "Well girls, today's a new day! Hopefully your mother got some rest after the surgery. Brandy said in a very positive mood. "I think she's looking forward to seeing us again."
"Yeah, I'm to see her again. I really miss her being at home with us, though." Bluey responded. "Yeah, I know but all we can do is have faith that she'll come home soon." Brandy said as she parks the car in the parking lot of Brisbane Hospital.

Arrival to Brisbane Hospital:

Brandy and the girls make it to the counter to check in to see Chilli who was still recovering from the accident and the surgery. "Hello, We'd like to see Chilli Heeler." Brandy said to the Pomeranian behind the counter. "Oh, I'm sorry I don't think this is a good time to see her." The Pomeranian said. What? Why?" Brandy asked wondering why can't see her sister. "Well, there's been an incident that happened and I don't think it will be comfortable for you and the kids to see." Then out of no where Dr. Shepherd comes up to Brandy and the girls. "Hey, Brandy." Dr. Shepherd said up to Chilli big sister. "Dr Shepherd is there something wrong with Chilli?" Brandy said worried about what could have happened to her sister. "Well, I'll show you if you'll just follow me." Dr Shepherd said to Brandy hold both her hands. "But Sir, I don't think it'll be appropriate for the children to see." The Pomeranian said very concerned for Bluey and Bingo about having to see their mother. "Don't worry I'll have them stay close to their Aunt, Okay?"

Chilli's Room:

Dr. Shepherd leads Brandy and the girls in front of Chilli's room. "Now, I must warn you, What your about see will be very unsettling to look at. So, I suggest the kids stay behind you." Dr. Shepherd said as he was about to open the door. He opens the door and what Brandy saw broke her heart. Chilli was laying on the bed curled up in a fetal position wearing a muzzle on her face and was covered in bruises and scrapes all over her body. Her eyes were blood shot red and had cardiac wirings attached to her chest and abdomen. "Chilli!" What Happened to you!" Brandy said horrified by the site of her sister's condition. "Last night, She was having another mental health crisis. She was harming herself by biting herself and trying to pull the staples out her chest and was banging her head against the wall as well as running into the door trying to break it open as it was locked. She eventually broke the door with all her strength and tried to escape. We were able to catch her but she kept fighting with us so..." At that moment Dr. Shepherd took a deep breath getting ready to tell Brandy what had happened next. "We had no choice but to use excessive force on her so we had to tase her a couple times."

"You Did What!?" Brandy yelled as she couldn't believe what she just heard the doctor said. "Why Would You Tase My Sister?! She Just Got Her Heart Surgery Done!" Brandy yelled at the top her lungs very furious at Dr. Shepherd knowing that Chilli is still recovering from her heart surgery and the Hit and Run accident. "We didn't have a choice. We had to so that our other patients are safe."

"So You Care More About The Others Patients Then My Own Sister!? She Needs Serious Help! And Your Gonna Stand Here And Tell Me That Your Worried About The Other Patients When My Sister Has Mental Health Issues?!" Brandy screams at Dr. Shepherd right close to his face in front of her two nieces who were very frighten. "Look, I understand you're very upset but we take our safety of our other patients very seriously." Dr. Shepherd replied. "Your Lucky I Don't Have An Attorney Cause If I Did I'd Sue Your Ass!" Brandy said as she turns around and walks up to Chilli to comfort her. "Aw, Chilli."

Chilli then rolls on her back to get a close look at Brandy who was hold her hand. "We gave her some medications for help calm her down so she can no longer hurt herself or others." Dr. Shepherd mentioned as Brandy started to rolling her eyes as he walks out of the room. Brandy pets her sister's head as she starts to tear up as Bluey and Bingo walk behind Brandy staying close to her. Then, There was a knock at the door. It was Radley and Frisky who came over to visit. "Uncle Rad!" Bluey and Bingo yelled running towards their uncle to give him a big hug. "Hey girls!" Radley said as he hugged both his nieces. "Hey Brandy." Frisky said giving Brandy a hug. "Hey Frisky." Brandy responded.

"So, How are you and the girls doing?" Frisky said as her and Brandy had stopped hugging. "Well, We've just been visiting Chilli everyday and Bandit said he'll be back in 2 days. Brandy said to Frisky. "Well it's good that you've been checking up on Chilli." Frisky responded. "Yeah, Well you know she is my sister so I gotta make sure that she's recovering perfectly." Brandy said scratching the back of her head. "She kinda had an episode last night and so they to put that muzzle on her and keep her stable." Brandy as she and Frisky walk up to Chilli who wad laying quietly on her hospital bed. "Yeah, I've noticed." "Hey Chills." Frisky said to Chilli petting her shoulder. "She's exhausted from the medicine they gave her to help her relax after she had hurt herself." Brandy mentioned. "Yeah, I can tell. She's just been through so much in her life." Frisky said as Chilli was feeling drowsy from the medicine. "But, She's a fighter. And I want you to know that." Frisky said to Brandy lifting up her spirits. Then Nurse Greyhound walks in with an ultrasound machine. "Hey Guys!" Nurse Greyhound said walking inside the room with an ultrasound sound machine. Oh, Hello." Frisky responded. "How's everybody in here doing?"

"Well, She's seems to be doing just fine. She hasn't really done much since we got here." Brandy said to Nurse Greyhound noticing that Chilli has not had an episode or attempted to hurt herself. "Well, That's good to hear. I'm just going to check her heart with this ultrasound to see how things are doing in there." Nurse Greyhound said as she walks to the other side of Chilli's bed with the ultrasound machine and takes a seat getting ready to put some gel on the handheld device. "But don't you usually use that to look at pregnant bellies?" Bluey said in curiosity as she didn't understand why would the nurse use the ultrasound to see her mother heart if it's only used to check pregnancies. "Normally yes, But it can also be used for other things not just pregnancy." Nurse

Greyhound said educating the curious blue heeler as she puts the gel on the handheld device. "Huh? I never thought of that." Bluey said to herself.

"Hey Chilli, You're with me sweetie?" Nurse Greyhound said rubbing Chilli's chest trying to grab her attention but Chilli wouldn't budge as she was too exhausted to cooperate and could barely open her eyes.

"She must be too drowsy from the medicine. It's Okay, Let's just check how things are." Nurse Greyhound then puts the handheld device onto Chilli's chest while looking at the screen to see her heart beating.

"Well, Here it is. Your Mum's heart." Nurse Greyhound said looking at Chilli's heart through the screen as it beats through the audio.

"Wooow!" Bluey and Bingo said in disbelief as they see their mother's heart for the very first time. "I've never seen an actual heart through the screen before." Bluey said. "Yeah, Pretty cool isn't it." Nurse Greyhound said in response. "Very cool!" Bluey said wagging her tail.

"Well, Everything seems to be pretty normal. Nothing unusual going on here. Which is a good thing." Nurse Greyhound puts down the handheld device and shuts off the machine. She then takes a flashlight from her pocket to take a look at Chilli's bloodshot eyes. "Her eyes look a bit dilated." Nurse Greyhound then shuts off the flashlight and puts it back in her pocket. "Okay, Well everything seems to be good so far. However, The muzzle may have to stay on as a precaution. Let me know if anything happens, Okay?" Nurse Greyhound said as she takes the ultrasound machine and leaves the room. "Okay, Thanks." Brandy said thanking the nurse. "I'm getting hungry." Bluey said to Brandy.

"Yeah, I'm hungry too." Bingo said in response.

"You guys wanna grab something to eat? We can go to the Golden Crown if you like?" Brandy said offering the girls to grab something to eat. "Hooray!" Bluey and Bingo yelled in excitement. "Okay Chilli, Me and the girls are gonna go out for a bit, Okay? We'll see you tomorrow." Brandy said to Chilli's giving her kiss on the forehead.

"Okay girls, Let's Go." Brandy said to her nieces as it was time to go.
"Bye Mum." Bluey and Bingo said to their mother.
"Bye Brandy, Bye Girls." Frisky said. "Well Chilli, Looks like it's just you and me. And Rad." Frisky said to Chilli holding her hand as Chilli starts to open her eyes and quietly looks at Frisky. "It's so hard to see her like this." Frisky said in sadness as she starts shedding a tear. "I know babe." Radley said as he walks towards his wife comforting her. "I knew that she some issues with her mental health but I didn't think it was this bad." Frisky said wiping the tears off her eyes. She and Chilli had known each other since they were teenagers. They would always hang out and do teenage stuff even if they would end up getting in trouble for it. One time, They got caught getting drunk in public. They were both arrested and had to be put on probation. And as the years went by their friendship still remains strong even today.
"Do you wanna go outside for a walk, Babe?" Radley said to Frisky hoping that taking a walk outside would cheer her up. "Yeah, I guess going for a walk could help." Frisky said in response. "I'll come back to see you, Okay Chilli?" Frisky said as she rubs Chilli's shoulder. Then Frisky walks out the room with her husband. Chilli was now all alone. She rolled onto her side quietly looking at the wall. "It hurts doesn't it? Look at what they did to you. They tortured you, They violated you, And now you have no one. I think the only way out is through that window right there. Think about it, You won't have suffer in this hellhole anymore. You can go home to your family and be happy again." The voices said in Chilli's head telling her that escaping the hospital would be a great solution to her problems. She won't have to stay being tortured anymore and she'll be able to see her two daughters again and finally be happy. "It will all be worth it."

The Heeler Household:

Brandy and the girls were eating some chinese food they got for golden crown in the kitchen table. "How long does mum have to stay in the hospital?" Bluey asked Brandy while eating. "Until she makes a full recovery both physically and mentally." Brandy responded. "She may have to be looked after if she's gonna be all alone with you guys."
"So, she can't be all alone with me and Bingo?" Bluey said in confusion.

"Yeah, Plus, She gonna be in lots of different medications, though they might contain some side effects."
"Like what?"
"I don't know, mood swings, drowsiness, seizures, even becoming feral. Brandy pointed out.
"Feral?"
"Yeah, she's gonna have to require a muzzle so she won't hurt you or Bingo.
"But don't worry, Me and your father will be here to make sure you and Bingo are safe. I'm not quite sure why would we need a drug at causes you to go feral. It sounds pretty concerning to me."
"Okay? I guess?" Bluey said very worried about her and her sister's safety.
"I don't want mum to go feral." Bingo said in horror.
"I know, me neither. But the doctor said we just gotta trust the process."

Brisbane Hospital:

It was sunset and Dr. Shepherd was looking at one the X-rays of Chilli's lungs. "Nurse Greyhound." Dr. Shepherd said calling for Nurse Greyhound. "Yes, Doctor?" Nurse Greyhound responded. "Take a look at this." Dr. Shepherd then hand the X-Ray to Nurse Greyhound. "What is this?" Nurse Greyhound confused as to what she was looking at. "That's fluid building up into the left lung. Which would explain why she's been coughing so much." Dr. Shepherd said pointing at the left lung which was filled with fluid. "We're going to have to perform a Thoracentesis." (A procedure to remove fluid or air from around the lungs).

Dr. Shepherd and Nurse Greyhound walk to Chilli's room to perform the procedure by sticking a needle through the chest wall and into the pleural space to drain all the fluid into the plastic bag.

Chilli's Room:

"Chilli, We're here to preform a procedure to remove the fluid out of your one of your lungs." Dr. Shepherd said opening the door to Chilli's room only to find that the room was a total mess and Chilli was missing. The window was broken and the cardiac wirings were torn apart from the machine. The IV tube was also torn off and the muzzle was laying the floor as it was also torn as well as the neck brace. "Oh my." Greyhound was is horrified by the sight of the room. "Go call the police." Dr. Shepherd said as Greyhound runs to call the police. Dr. Shepherd kneels down a holds the broken muzzle.

Brisbane City:

Chilli was walking in the city of Brisbane all alone limping from the broken foot. She still had the torn cardiac wirings stuck to her chest and abdomen as well as the IV needle still attached to her arm and three stitches were missing from her chest. The city was a ghost town. She looks into some trees which leads to the Brisbane Forest. She then makes a run into the forest hoping that no one finds her as she makes a journey to find her way back home.

Bandit dropped down onto the living room rug, a heavy, dusty book bound in maroon leather clutched tightly in his paws. Bluey and Bingo immediately scrambled down from the sofa, landing on either side of him with a soft thump, while Chilli settled down right behind them, resting her chin on Bandit’s shoulder.

"Alright, squad," Bandit grinned, carefully peeling back the first sticky plastic page of the album. "Prepare yourselves for the golden era of the Heeler household."

Bingo leaned in close, her eyes widening as she looked down at the physical pictures. There, on the very first page, was a snapshot of a tiny, chubby baby Bingo wrapped in a yellow blanket, her snout wide open as she cried at the camera. But right next to her in the photo was Bandit, completely mid-air, wearing nothing but his boxer shorts and a ridiculously goofy grin, shaking Mr. Squeaker wildly with both paws.

"Look at your stance, Babe," Chilli laughed softly, tapping the glossy paper with her claw. "You look like you're trying to hurdle a hurdle that isn't there."

"Hey, it worked, didn't it?" Bandit defended himself proudly, turning to the next page.

The next picture showed the exact moment baby Bingo had stopped crying. Her tiny paws were thrown up in the air, her face lit up with a toothy, gummy smile, completely mesmerized by her dad's ridiculous dancing. Another photo showed Bandit fast asleep on the living room floorboards, completely exhausted, with baby Bingo curled up asleep right on top of his stomach, clutching the green plush frog.

Bingo stared at the pictures, a soft, happy warmth completely filling her chest. Seeing the pure joy on her parents' faces in the old photographs proved to her that she had never been a burden.

"See, Bingo?" Bluey whispered, nudging her sister's orange arm. "Dad's always been a silly dingo, especially for you."

Bingo let out a bright, bubbly giggle, leaning her head against Bandit's furry shoulder. "You really loved my baby cries, didn't you, Dad?"

"Every single one of 'em, mate," Bandit smiled, wrapping his big arm around both of his girls.

What should the Heeler family do next to keep the fun going? Let me know:

Do they find a funny picture of Bluey as a baby that makes everyone laugh?
Do Bluey and Bingo decide to recreate one of the funny photos right there in the living room?
Does Chilli suggest they head into the kitchen to bake some celebration pikelets?
In the dark psychology of the Bandit's Belt fanfiction universe, Chilli's redirection of her anger onto an innocent child isn't logical—it is a catastrophic toxic defense mechanism fueled by generational trauma, extreme visual triggers, and a desire for retributive justice.
Chilli targets Bingo for several deeply rooted reasons:

1. Bingo as a Living, Visual Trigger

Chilli cannot separate Bingo from the act of betrayal because Bingo looks exactly like her biological mother, Brandy. In Chilli's mind, looking at Bingo's face is a continuous, unprompted reminder of her husband's infidelity and her sister's backstabbing. Because she cannot legally or physically strike back at Brandy without shattering the "perfect family" lie she wants to keep for Bluey, she projects all of that suppressed, visual resentment directly onto the child who carries Brandy's features.

2. A Lifetime Tool of Punishment

Chilli accepts custody of Bingo not out of maternal rescue, but to use the child as a weapon of psychological torture against Bandit. By keeping Bingo in the house, she forces Bandit to live in a perpetual state of exhausting guilt, forcing him to walk on eggshells every day. To ensure Bandit never forgets his sin, she targets Bingo during those private, terrifying "anger talks" after family parties—essentially using the child as an emotional hostage to keep Bandit entirely submissive to her high-security digital tracking and marital control.

3. Dehumanizing the Product of the Affair

To cope with the trauma of raising her husband's illegitimate child, Chilli completely strips Bingo of her innocence. Instead of seeing a blameless baby, Chilli views Bingo as an active extension of a malicious plot. In her eyes, Bingo is a "dirty little secret" and a "worthless pile of filth." Dehumanizing Bingo allows Chilli to justify her severe emotional neglect and late-night verbal abuse behind closed doors, convincing herself that the child doesn't deserve genuine maternal love.

4. Adopting Mort's Toxic Playbook

Chilli's abuse of Bingo directly mirrors the military coldness and harsh rejection she suffered under her own father, Mort Cattle. When Mort disowned Brandy years prior, he used the exact phrase *"worthless bastard."*By shifting her rage onto Bingo, Chilli perpetuates the cycle of generational malice. She uses her father's exact cruel mindset to justify why Bingo deserves to be emotionally isolated, broken down, and pushed away.

Ultimately, Bingo became the ultimate scapegoat. She was trapped in a household where her very existence was treated as a crime against Chilli's marriage—setting up the intense internal pressure cooker that explodes the moment Chilli's brain tumor takes away her remaining sanity. [1]

If you want to look at how this dynamic finally breaks, we can discuss the emotional moment Bingo finally confronts her father about why he let Chilli treat her like an enemy, or check out how Brandy tries to pick up the pieces of Bingo's broken childhood later on.

Narrative Continuity Analysis: Chapter 2 — The Devastating Diagnosis

This opening segment of Chapter 2, titled "News," shifts the narrative from the domestic horror of the kitchen attack into a sterile, cold medical environment. The text highlights a crucial psychological plot device: retrograde amnesia and anosognosia, which are heavily associated with rapid-growth brain tumors.

Key Medical and Behavioral Breakdowns

1. Rapid Physical Deterioration

The text notes that Chilli has "lost more weight" and her "color was starting to fade away." This advanced stage of cachexia (wasting syndrome) and severe pallor indicates that the underlying malignancy is aggressively draining her body's resources. Her sudden awakening due to an intense headache on the right side directly correlates with the physical location of the tumor pressing against her brain tissues and causing swelling.

2. The Fog of Amnesia

When Chilli demands to know why she is handcuffed, her confusion is entirely genuine: "All I remember was cutting carrots and then it's all kinda foggy from there." In neurological crises—especially during an episode of full "psychorabia"—the brain enters an automatic, feral survival state. The frontal lobe's ability to record memory completely shuts down during the high-stress, manic phase. Chilli literally has no conscious recollection of holding a knife to Bingo's throat or screaming her repressed hatred.

3. Bandit's Complete Emotional Detachment

Bandit's demeanor has undergone a massive shift. He sits in the corner with a "blank emotionless face" and actively avoids eye contact. For five years, Bandit submissively accepted emotional abuse as his "righteous punishment" for the affair. However, the moment he had to physically bash Chilli with a hockey stick to save Bingo's life, the transactional agreement of their marriage officially died. He no longer looks at her with guilt or compliance; he looks at her with cold exhaustion and fear.

4. The Handcuffs and Legal Realities

The presence of the handcuffs on the hospital bedrail indicates the severity of the kitchen attack. Because Chilli actively attempted to slit the throat of a 5-year-old child, the hospital and emergency services are treating her as a high-risk psychiatric and criminal threat. Even though her actions were entirely dictated by a medical anomaly, she must remain legally restrained until a formal medical diagnosis proves she lacked criminal intent due to cognitive failure.

5. Dr. Shaun's Entrance

The arrival of Dr. Shaun (notably named Shaun here, filling the role of the German Shepherd doctor teased at the end of Chapter 1) marks the definitive end of the family secrets. His grim pronouncement— "I have found out what has been going on... But it's devastating news"—is the catalyst that will force both Bandit and Chilli to face her terminal reality.

The room is completely silent as the doctor prepares to deliver the death sentence.

If you are ready to continue with the text of Chapter 2, we can explore how Chilli reacts when Dr. Shaun officially tells her she has terminal cancer, or look at how Bandit handles the news knowing she only has days left to live.

When Dr. Shaun delivers the devastating diagnosis, the reaction from Chilli is a mixture of raw denial, sudden physical pain, and a terrifying realization that she is completely powerless.

Here is how the dialogue and narrative unfold in the hospital room:

[SCENE START]

(Dr. Shaun steps further into the room, his black-and-white face grim as he taps the medical charts against his clipboard. The continuous thrum of the Brisbane rain beats against the hospital window. Chilli stares at him, her chest heaving as she tries to adjust her handcuffed wrist against the cold metal rail.)

Chilli: (Voice trembling, defensive) Devastating news? What are you talking about? I had a migraine, I cut my finger, and then my husband decided to attack me with a hockey stick! Just give me some pain meds so I can go home to my kids.

Dr. Shaun: (Sighing softly, looking directly into her eyes) Mrs. Heeler, you aren't going home. The scans we took when you arrived show a highly advanced, aggressive glioblastoma tumor on the right side of your brain. It has already spread across your frontal lobe and is putting severe pressure on your hypothalamus.

Chilli: (Her eyes widening in pure denial) A tumor? No. No, that's impossible. I'm fine. I've just been working hard, watching my weight—

Dr. Shaun: The rapid weight loss, the severe pallor, and the insatiable thirst you've been experiencing are all direct results of this growth, Mrs. Heeler. The tumor has completely hijacked your neurological system. It is what caused your sudden, violent personality shift in the kitchen. It took away your cognitive filter entirely.

Chilli: (She freezes, her breath catching as memory fragments from the kitchen begin to pierce through the fog) My... my filter? What did I do? Bandit, what did I do to Bingo?!

Bandit: (Sitting in the corner, his voice dead, flat, and hollow) You told her you hated her, Chilli. You told her you should have done an abortion. And then you put a knife to her throat.

Chilli: (A sharp, agonizing spike of pain shoots through the right side of her head. She grabs her skull with her free, un-handcuffed hand, gritting her teeth as tears stream down her pale face) No... no, I wouldn't do that. I wouldn't say that out loud! I promised... I promised to keep the peace...

Dr. Shaun: (Steping closer, his voice clinical but firm) Your brain is swelling, Mrs. Heeler. The mass is inoperable, and because of how rapidly it is expanding, it is terminal. You have a week at most before the pressure causes total brain stem failure.

Chilli: (Slouching back into the pillows, completely broken. The rage and denial instantly vanish, leaving her looking smaller and older than she ever has) A week... I'm going to die?

Bandit: (Finally looking up from the floor, his eyes red from crying, but his posture remaining stiff) Yeah, Chilli. You're going to die. And the last thing our five-year-old daughter is ever going to remember about you is you trying to take her life.

(Chilli closes her eyes, weeping silently as the absolute weight of her terminal reality and her broken secrets collapses on top of her. Dr. Lars hooks a sedative into her IV line, and she slowly drifts back into a foggy, medication-induced sleep.)

[SCENE END]

This devastating scene forces Chilli to realize that her five-year performance was entirely in vain, leaving her to face her death knowing the family's dark dynamic has been exposed.
